LABOR CONDITIONS
RESPONSIBLE FOR UNSETTLEMENTSeveral Important Factors to Be Taken Into Consideration in Sizing Up the Wall Street Situation.

Special Correspondence to the Herald

New York, Sept. 7.—The stock market has been a period of continued unsettlement on the stock exchange. The chief reasons for this were the discouraging labor and political situation. There is unquestionably a deep feeling of uneasiness regarding the present aggressive attitude of labor, coming at a time when business and economic conditions are as unfavorable in making further concessions. The difficulties with labor appear to be getting rounder during the rule of Wilson, and have been greatly stimulated by excess of the labor agitation in England. The conditions on both sides, however, are vastly different. American railroad employees have already received financial advantages in wages, and the inability of the railroads to secure better rates, coupled with a lack of satisfactions in the course of trade, render the position of the companies a very disconcerting one. On the other hand the British railroad employees were poorly paid and have no advance, although the British railroads had been enduring a period of more than average prosperity. The demands of the English workers were supported by a sense of responsibility, which does not exist in the demands of American railroad labor. Should our American employers insist upon forcing their demands, the result cannot be but disastrous.

These conditions, in brief, account for the prevailing tone of pessimism which is more wide of Wall street than in any other part of the country. How deep and how far this financial disturbance will go remains to be seen, and it remains to be seen whether or not it has not been overdone. It must not be overlooked that there are countering influences at work which, in due season, and, perhaps sooner than expected, must modify the present tone of discouragement. First among these is the crop outlook. This is distinctly not bad as at first feared. The wheat crop will not be large, yet it will be sufficient for all practical purposes and will have a moderate surplus for export. The corn crop, the largest single factor in our national prosperity, will certainly be a satisfactory one. It is perfectly unreasonable to take an discouragement because we fail to reach last year's bumper crop of over 3,125,000,000 bushels. Since the last government report there has been a decided improvement in condition, which supplemented by the fact that the government estimates are usually below the mark, suggests that we shall have a crop of at least 2,800,000,000 if not 2,900,000,000 bushels. The latter may be an outside figure, but the first named estimate is practically a certainty.

So great nation as at the present time wage war against another without having the financial backing of France. The people of France have the greatest storage of ready money of any nation. Actual war between Germany and France should not, therefore, be taken seriously, considering that the German government is already overwhelmed with both debt and expense, as indicated by their last annual statement showing a deficit of about $40,000,000. Wherefore, therefore would Germany get money to carry on an expensive war? Not from England, France or the United States—the three great money powers. How could Russia have carried on the war without France's assistance? France furnished the money, hence as heir of Tirolo Padilla, of Padillas, N. M., for the claim 221, for lot 1, section 1; lots 2 and 3, section 2, and lot 4, sections 2 and 3, township 2, north, range 2 east, survey approved 1903.

He names the following witnesses to prove his actual continuous adverse possession of said tract for 26 years next preceding the survey of the township, viz.: Roman Marquez, Silverio Sanchez, Marcelino Sanchez, Juan Sanchez y Pena, all of Padillas, N. M.

Any person who desires to protest against the allowance of said proof, or who knows of any substantial reason under the law and regulations of the interior department why such proof should not be allowed, will be given an opportunity at the above-mentioned time and place to cross-examine the witness of said claimant and to offer evidence in rebuttal of that submitted by claimant.

comes both to themselves, the participants and public interest in general. The railroad situation is one which requires great tact and forbearance on both sides. Railroads should make an effort to learn the situation affecting the miners, and each should show a willingness to look at affairs from the other's point of view. Both management and men hold in mind the interests of the public, which will not longer stand being trifled with because of differences between employer and employee. It seems incredible that any intelligent labor leaders will precipitate a crisis at this time, since they and their followers would in the end be the worst sufferers. Fortunately, the Union Pacific management has shown much wisdom in meeting the miners' representatives in a considerate manner and explaining to them the present situation. As reasonable men, it is difficult to imagine otherwise than that the labor leaders will still more favorably demand what they need, and should. Canada find it necessary to borrow more freely for handling her unusually large crops, we shall be in a position to afford such assistance without encumbrance to ourselves. The financial situation in New York can be regarded as exceptionally sound. There has been heavy liquidation during the last few weeks, making that of a fair degree panic, and the liberal decline in values which has taken place, although a disorder, diminishes the importance for a further fall and lessens the indecision for nearish operations. Not a few high-class stocks are now selling upon a very attractive investment basis, a factor which is not being overlooked by shrewd buyers, and as soon as the present disorder has run its course we may look for a decided recovery. Purchases of this character can scarcely fail to result profitably at no distant date. Wall street invariably develops adverse conditions far ahead of their actual development, and when business and politics seem most deranged security values are often recovering from their worst depression.

Pessimism is nearly always the result of a lack of knowledge, and the inability of the railroads to secure better rates, coupled with a lack of satisfactions in the course of trade, render the position of the companies a very disconcerting one. On the other hand the British railroad employees were poorly paid and have no advance, although the British railroads had been enduring a period of more than average prosperity. The demands of the English workers were supported by a sense of responsibility, which does not exist in the demands of American railroad labor. Should our American employers insist upon forcing their demands, the result cannot be but disastrous.
